A FAREWELL PARTY.

Capt. McCurley and officers of the U. S. S. Nipsic gave a farewell party on board last night. Invitations had been numerously circulated, to which there was a liberal response. The ship's boats were at the wharf to convey the guests aboard. The ship was specially and prettily decorated for the occasion. Among the guests were the Sovereign of the nation, Cabinet Ministers, Legislators, and diplomatic and consular representatives of foreign countries. Dancing was on the programme, for which the Hawaiian band furnished music. Refreshments of the best quality were dis-pensed in abundance. Enjoyment abounded, the only reflection calculated to produce a contrary feeling being the fact that the occasion was one of "farewell" to the ship and her people.

FAREWELL TO GOO KIM.

Last evening the Chinese Christians of Honolulu filled the lower rooms of the Chinese church which is under the care of Mr. Frank Damon. The members of the church and Sabbath School came together to give a farewell reception to Mr. Goo Kim, who has been for a number of years a deacon in the church. Speeches were made by several of the Ch namen; then the pastor of the church, Mr. Wong spoke of the rewards that must come when after the labor of the past such kind words were now expressed by those who had been associated with him. As a reminder of these rewards a beautiful silver cup was presented. The pastor quoted some lines from one of the Chinese poems, in which the joy of drinking the cup of social pleasure was described, and then voiced the wish of his friends-that Mr. Goo Kim might by-and-by be permitted to drink the cup of the water of life. Refreshments were served and a very social hour passed by. The Chinese school has already opened with a large number of scholars both boys and girls. Some of the Chinese are evidently showing great loyalty to the friends who for many years have worked so earnestly in their behalf, SEVENTY-FIRST DAY.

THURSDAY, Sept. 4. The House met at 10 o'clock.

PETERION. Ren. Brown, on suspension of the A Sayino's Bank book has been rules, presented a petition from L. lost and a reward is offered for he A. Thurston, ex-Minister of the Interior, complaining that certain charges were made against himself and the Superintendent of Public Works by the finance committee, without having given them any opportunity of defense or explanation regarding the matters alleged, and oraying that an impartial committee e appointed to investigate the charges in question. Nobie Haldwin moved that the petition be laid on the table to be queidered with the finance commit-

Noble Muller moved that the petition be referred back to the introlucer. It was a piece of impudence. Two of the late Ministers sneaked out of Honolula whenever they went out of office. Rep. Brown asked who had impudence, the introducer or the peti-

Noble Mutter said the petitioner. Rep. Brown said that everybody had the right of petition under the Constitution.

Noble Widemann regarded the petition as impudence in the highest degree. There was the "Thunderer" this morning saying the finance committee's report contained nothing that either party could consider, but now the late Minister finds something in it against which he feels bounds to defend himself. It was an insult to the House to ask for a committee to investigate the report of one of its standing committees. What did the ex-Minister want of a committee? It was to hoodoo them -to explain his motives. The House had nothing to do with his motives but had to deal with his actions. He would move that the petition be laid on the table.

Rep. Rickard, in supporting the motion of Noble Baldwin, took exception to the language used regarding Mr. Thurston, who did not deserve such treatment. Rep. Kalua supported Noble Baldwin's motion, saying that if the finance committee had brought charges against the petitioner without giving him a hearing, it was certainly a matter to be investigated by the House. They should not have it go abroad that one party in the House tried to suppress fair discussion. There was a general agreement lately between both parties to work together for the common bene-

Rep. R. W. Wilcox interjected that he had not been a party to any such agreement.

Rep. Kalua went on to argue that it was wrong for members to gratify pite against political oppon refusing to entertain the petition. Members would complain if a court of justice condemned a man unheard. He had grown up with Mr. Thurston but disagreed with his politics, and he did not appear on this occasion as his personal defender. All he wanted was to give the petitioner fair play and to sustain the constitutional right of petition.

Rep. Pachaole claimed that the late Minister had a perfect right to come in by petition and demand a hearing in answer to the charges against him. Rep. R. W. Wilcox was surprised that the late Minister of the Interior should have at last emerged from his obscurity. If you saw a group of men passing and sang out, "There goes a bald man," the one that would get mad and take off his hat would be the bald man. In this case it was clear that Mr. Thurston was the bald-headed man of the late Ministry. That gentleman did not give Mr. Gibson the chance of a hearing on the 30th of June, 1887.

Rep. Kalua called the member to order as being away from the question, and both members were talking at each other, when the President rapped for order and called for interpretation.

The President ruled the remarks out of order.

Rep. Bush questioned the ruling, hold that the hon, member was only instituting a proper comparison. Rep. Wilcox, after a few words more, said he favored considering the petition with the report. Noble Widemann had noteso much objection to the petition as to its tenor. The petitioner asked for an impartial committee, but what he wanted was a partial one-a committee on whom he could put his own spectacles, whom he could would, however, withdraw his mo-Rep. Nawahi was in favor of entertaining the petition-would like to have the Minister there even to have him explain his authority for borrowing money to build the Volcano road. If he could not show liable for the amount himself.

Rep. Kahookano admitted the right of the ex-Minister to petition the House, but he went too far when he asked to have the report of one committee referred to another committee. Therefore he moved the petition be referred back to the introducer, with leave to present another petition for something the House could grant. Noble Muller regarded the impu- mittee's report carried.

clause of the petition to its in its for quest for another committee, and to its qualifying the committee wanted as "impartial," which was an uncalled-for reflection on the flunnee committee and on the President who appointed it. He had no objection to the Minister having a hearing. Noble McCarthy stated that the Soance committee stated nothing regarding the Interior Department that was not taken from the books of that Department. They found the books so well kept and clear that they did not need to make inquiries excepting with regard to the electric light. He would be very glad to give the late Minister of the Interior an opportunity to defend himself, as there was nothing given in the report which the committee was not ready to prove.

Noble Mactarlane sustained the remarks of the previous speaker. They were very glad to find the books of the Laterior Office so wellkept, and only wished the books of other departments were in a similar condition. Regarding the motion of the member from Kohala, that the petition be referred back to be composed in a more gentlemanly fashion, he considered that would be useless, as the petitioner could not prepare a petition of a different kind. The late Minister thought the sore spot on his head was a public ealamity, and his request for a committee was insulting to the President, the fluance committee, and the House. Rep. Brown admitted that such a petition was unprecedented, but the action of the House in making the finance committee's report an order of the day was unusual. He also admitted that the wording of the petition was too strong. It was written hastily that morning and if he had perused it critically he believed he would have bad it amended before presentation. There was, however, reason for the late Minister's request. The committee had given conclusions on points of law in their report, and there should be a hearing for the purpose of getting other views on the points involved. The speaker referred to other circumstances of the ease which he considered put Mr. Thurston at an ındue disadvantage.

Rep. Knudsen said that if the etition came from his own brother he would not receive it. The principle of allowing one committee to investigate the work of another one should not be entertained. The petition should be laid on the table and consideration of the report be postponed for a week.

Noble Burchardt's objection to the petition to the petition was its gross injustice in accusing the committee of partiality. The late Minister went away soon after his resignation, and he did not see him again till a, few days ago. Then the House should remember how late the report of the Minister of the Interior was in presentation to the House. The accusation of partiality was unjust and the report should be laid on the table.

Rep. Bush agreed with Rep. Knudsen's idea of postponing consideration of the report and allowing the late Minister in the meantime to present his defense to the finance committee. The implication of partiality on the part of the finance committee was an affront to the House, and the late Minister was old enough to have known what language was proper in addressing the Assembly.

Noble Baldwin said that the finance committee was entirely composed of members who were opposed to the late Ministry, and perhaps particularly to the late Minister of the Interior. He thought too much had been made of the word "impartial," which he did not take as a slur on the finance committee, but simply an intimation that a committee representing both parties should be appointed. If there had been even one supporter of the late Ministry on the finance committee, he believed this discussion would not have taken place to-day. He understood there were explanations that could have been given regarding certain transactions, and, without casting any reflections on the committee, he believed they would stand better with the country if they had given the late Minister a hearing, and they should not object to doing so on this occasion.

Noble Burchardt, in reply to a reference to himself by the previous speaker, stated that he refused to support a motion for want of confidence in the late Ministry, until good cause could be shown therefor. It was known to many membees that the National Reform Party did not count on him to support such a mo-

Noble Widemann proposed that the President leave the chair, and make believe black was white. He let the late Minister of the Interior take his place and lay down the law to this House. Rep. Kalua had the utmost confidence in the finance committee, but believed the late Minister should have a hearing. He moved the previous question, which carried. The motion to lay on the table was his authority he should be made lost by the casting vote of the President. A motion to adjourn was lost.

Rep. Kalua moved the petition be referred to the finance committee, with instructions to give the late Minister of the Interior a hearing. Rep. Bush raised the point of order that the previous question precluded a new motion.

The motion to lay on the table to be considered with the finance com-

PHENICEPTAN HEATESTER. President Walker, on a motion for recess, replied to remarks of Noble Baldwin, which, though nicely made, implied that he had been partial in appointing the finance committee. It was not easy to appoint the committees in this small House, five on each committee. He was requested by many members to keep them off committees so far as possible. He belonged to the National Reform Party and considered he had a right to appoint a unjority of that party on every committee. This was all he endeavored to do with the finance committee. He was very little acquainted with several of the country members, but he appointed two of them who were claimed as members of the Reform Party. He took the Advertiser's view of their polities and thought he had a fair committee, and was very sorry if they had gone back on him. (Laugh-Recess from 12:25 to 1:30.
